

Table of Contents

Introduction	9
1. On This Subject and its Fate	10
2. An Author's Debts	13
Chapter 1: The Clientele as the "Pornography of Politics": Words and Their Meaning	17
1. In Search of Words	20
a. Sir Walter and the Eroticism of the Clientele	25
2. Formal/Informal	28
3. Open Questions	29
4. Christ and Aristotle	31
Chapter 2: Elements of Theory	35
1. The Two Languages of Science	36
2. Proposed Definitions	39
a. The Cavalcata in the Service of Church Reform	48
b. St. Paul and the Christian Community in Corinth	51
3. Fidélités-Clientèles : Roland Mousnier and the Anglo-Saxons	56
a. King Henry and the Knight Errant	59
Chapter 3: Gestures of a Lop-Sided Friendship	69
1. The Social Function of the Kiss	69
2. Equality – Subordination – Subsistence	70
3. The Clientele in Graphics: Gérard de Laresse	73
4. The Clientele in Graphics: Jean-Pierre Norblin	76
a. The Polish Nobleman in the Eyes of a Woman from Gdańsk	82
5. The Gesture on the Upper Nile, the Hudson, and the Vistula	83
Chapter 4: Antiquity: The Forgotten Clientele	87
1. Two Legends	89

2.	The Era of the Republic: The Classic Clientele	91
a.	Plutarch: Marius	94
3.	On the Monopoly over Clienteles	97
Chapter 5: The Modern State and its Variants		101
1.	The Royal Court: “The Sun and its Reflected Rays”	102
2.	The Astronomer as Courtier	105
3.	“Merrie Olde England” and its Court	110
4.	The Clientele Formalized: Scottish Bonds of Manrent	126
5.	Bloody Revenge (the Feud), or Elements of a Historical Parallel	134
6.	France: The Royal Court, the Aristocracy, and Officials	139
7.	Sweden as a Power: The Court and Nobility in Service to the State	146
a.	A Polish Noblewoman in the Swedish Network	149
Chapter 6: The Old-Poland Clientele		151
1.	The Rzeczpospolita Samorządowa	152
2.	The Consequences of the Statutes (Privileges) of Nieszawa (1454)	158
3.	Clientelism and Oligarchy	162
4.	Liberty and the Raison d'état: “Anonym” on the Rzeczpospolita	165
5.	The Magnateria : Magnatial Rule over Space	175
6.	Political Clientelism Alla Polacca	181
a.	To Like as Much as One's Interests Command	183
7.	The Revival of Political Sarmatism	190
Chapter 7: The Mediterranean Lands		197
1.	South and North	198
a.	Selling Vegetables in the South	198
2.	The Conflict over Mezzogiorno	203
3.	“Amoral Familism” and Limited Good	205
a.	Scarcity and a Lord's Grace	211
4.	Sicily	212

5.	The Mafioso and his Clientele: From the Feudo to Crime Syndicate	215
a.	Don Calò and Don Genco: “Honey wouldn’t melt in their mouths”	219
6.	The Peripheries and Extremities of the Mediterranean Region	226
a.	The Feud, or to be a Client from the Cradle	230
7.	“And thou shalt take no gift [...]”	232
a.	Corruption in the Building of Socialism on One Country	235
8.	The Patron, the Client, and the Division of Social Income	242
Chapter 8: The Clientele and Political Parties		249
a.	“Besen-, Fakten – und Aktenrein”	252
1.	“Palimpsest of Friendship”: Victorian Patronage among Gentlemen	254
2.	Italy: From Unification through the Crisis in Christian Democracy	270
3.	The United States: The White House and its Surroundings	281
a.	The Führer’s Gefolgsman	282
b.	“The Best and the Brightest”	283
4.	Chicago: Mayor Richard J. Daley and the “Democratic Political Machine”	287
a.	The Reflections of Mr. Plunkitt	290
Chapter 9: The USSR: Lenin, Stalin and Collective Leadership		299
1.	The Legacy of Autocracy and Revolution	299
2.	From Cliques to Terror	302
3.	Clienteles in the Era of “Collective Leadership”	309
4.	“Anatomy of a Spectre”	320
a.	Sweaters for the Arctic	321
Chapter 10: Africa, Kings, Dictators and Citizens-Subjects		325
1.	European Words in the African Bush	326
2.	African Cases of Feudalism/Clientelism	328
3.	Variations on Dependence: Cows and People	340
a.	Proverbs from the Lakes	341

4. Farmers and Forest People	342
5. The Patron and Colonial Administration	344
6. Decolonization and the Myth of Modernization	349
7. Mobutu Sese Seko as Le Roi Soleil	352
Chapter 11: The Third World: Unity and Diversity	361
1. Thailand and Quasi-Clientelism	361
a. Falcons and Camels	363
2. Latin America: One or Many?	363
3. Compadre-Compadrazgo	367
4. Between the Hacienda and the Ballot Box	371
Chapter 12: The Clientele Today on a Global Scale	373
1. Mchod-Yon : Patronage and the Sovereignty of Tibet	374
2. Clientelism as the Highest Stage of Imperialism	376
3. The Dictator as Rebellious Client	387
Chapter 13: Sketches of the Present Day: Clienteles after Communism	391
1. Patrons and Clients in Poland after the PRL	391
2. Russia: Market Variations and the Spluttering of Clients	399
Final Thoughts: On Reservations, and Values	407
1. People and Animals	411
Bibliography	413