

Contents

Acknowledgments	x
Method of citation of Kant's works	xii
Introduction	xiv
PART I
Kant and the legacy of modernity	1
§1 From universal monarchy to global authority	3
§1.1 The debate over the Indios and the School of Salamanca	11
§1.2 Disclosure of modernity: Francisco de Vitoria's theory of global authority and the right to travel (ius peregrinandi)	18
§1.2.1 De Vitoria's conception of power and authority	23
§1.2.2 Shifting paradigms of law: equality of men and impartiality of ius gentium	28
§1.2.3 Ius peregrinandi (right to travel) and iustum pretium (theory of just price)	31
§1.3 Reacting to colonization: the debate of Valladolid (1550–1)	35
§2 The tradition of internationalist pacifism before Kant: utopia or cosmopolis?	40
§2.1 Innovating Rousseau's general will	51

PART 2
Kant's critique of just war theory and colonialism	59
§3 The 'sorry comforters'	61
§3.1 Grotius' freedom of the seas and the laws of war	65
§3.2 Pufendorf: the state as a subject of international law	69
§3.3 Vattel's rejection of Wolff's civitas maxima	72
§3.4 ... and Wolff's civitas maxima?	75
§3.4.1 Kant, Wolff, and the idea of a civitas gentium	77
§4 Kant's rejection of just war theory	82
§5 Kant on race and colonialism	88
PART 3
Theory and practice: the world (state) republic as a regulative idea of reason	97
§6 Freedom, nature and right	99
§6.1 The inherent value of freedom	102
§7 The illusions of reason: freedom as a regulative idea	107
§7.1 The world (state) republic and the unity of theory and practice	114
§7.2 Thinking the contradiction between provisional and peremptory rights	119
PART 4
Juridical constructivism and the cosmopolitan constitution	131
§8 Thinking political, thinking cosmopolitan	133
§8.1 Kant's legacy and the idea of a transitional ius cosmopoliticum	141
§8.1.1 Institutional progressions: the regulative role of the multistate confederation	146

§8.1.2 Kant's ius publicum and the idea of a transitional ius cosmopolitanum 149

§9 Constructivism in cosmopolitan law: Kant's right to visit	159
§9.1 Starting points for a constructivist justification of cosmopolitan right: on the inherent connection between (external) freedom and possession within the original community	163
§9.2 The 'right to visit' as a constructivist principle of cosmopolitan law	171
§9.3 Thinking cosmopolitan through the 'critical' public use of reason	176
§10 Thinking with Kant 'beyond' Kant: actualizing sovereignty and citizenship in the transnational sphere	185
§10.1 'Constitutional mindset' and the progression towards cosmopolitan peace	189
§10.2 The 'general united will' as a priori idea for the cosmopolitan rule of law	197
§10.3 Double sovereignties and plural Citizenries: a rejoinder to a (virtual) 'family quarrel' between Kant and Habermas?	201
Conclusion	205
References	207
Analytic index	221